The Gift is a children's picture book written by Laura-Lee Blackmore with illustrations by Paul Schultz. It follows the story of Loxley, a young girl scheduled for heart surgery.

She is scared and wishes to return home, but after receiving a gingerbread-colored bear from a hospital volunteer, she feels less anxious. Loxley names the bear Patch, and he becomes her source of comfort and support during the surgery. After the procedure, Loxley receives encouragement from her family and finds solace in her connections with loved ones. When she has the opportunity to be there for someone else in her family, Loxley passes on the gift of Patch, ensuring that another person can experience the same comfort and support she felt during her surgery.

The Gift is a heartwarming story that beautifully illustrates themes of love, resilience, and the importance of connection. It shows how simple gestures can have a profound impact on those facing challenging times. The tale teaches children about empathy and the significance of giving and receiving support during difficult moments. Laura-Lee Blackmore's narration is straightforward, making it easy for children to follow and understand, especially for those who are learning to read. Many readers will feel inspired to face their challenges with confidence and remember that they are never alone. I particularly loved the metaphor of tears and leaves, as it was both unique and heartfelt. Additionally, the colorful illustrations enhance the narrative, making it visually engaging for young readers. I thoroughly enjoyed this book and highly recommend it to readers of all ages, as it offers valuable lessons on empathy, resilience, and the power of love during tough times."
